The St. Regis Princeville Resort Featured in Condé Nast Traveler's 2011 Gold List

The St. Regis Princeville Resort is pleased to announce that the resort has been named to Condé Nast Traveler's 2011 Gold List. The much-anticipated annual list represents the world's finest properties, the best places to stay, and acts as the ultimate annotated guide for travelers. Elected by Condé Nast Traveler's affluent readers, the St. Regis Princeville Resort was rated with an incredible overall score of 90.8, receiving especially high marks for the properties' exceptional rooms, location, service and design.

Perched on the cliffs of Kauai's North Shore, The St. Regis Princeville Resort opened last year after a multi-million dollar renovation and reflects Hawaii's natural surroundings of the sea, sky and earth. Paying homage to the island's beautiful land and vibrant culture, the hotel's transformation was guided by the Hawaiian concept of the Ahupua'a, a philosophy of living in balance with nature. A masterpiece of style and refinement, the resort boasts stunning views of Hanalei Bay and Makana Mountain and offers luxurious suites and rooms, Jean-Georges Vongerichten's Kauai Grill, the 11,000 square foot Halele'a Spa, the Makai championship golf course, a spectacular infinity pool, as well as St. Regis' signature Butler service. As the legendary brand's first resort in Hawaii, the St. Regis Princeville Resort introduced an unparalleled level of sophistication and serene luxury to one of the most remarkable destinations in the world.
